By Car: Göttingen is easily reachable by car, thanks to its proximity to major highways. The city lies near the A7 motorway, one of Germany's key north-south routes, which connects it directly to major cities such as Hamburg in the north and Munich in the south. This makes road travel to Göttingen straightforward and efficient.

By Train: Göttingen boasts excellent rail connections, with its central train station being a major stop on the Deutsche Bahn high-speed ICE network. Direct train services link Göttingen to major cities including Berlin, Frankfurt, and Hanover, often within just a couple of hours. The high frequency and reliability of the train services ensure a smooth and comfortable journey for travelers.

By Air: For international visitors, Göttingen is conveniently accessible from several major airports. The nearest airports are Hannover Airport (HAJ) and Frankfurt Airport (FRA). Hannover Airport is approximately 130 kilometers away and can be reached by train in about 1.5 hours. Frankfurt Airport, one of Europe's largest and busiest airports, is about 260 kilometers away and offers direct train services to Göttingen, taking approximately 2.5 hours. Additionally, other nearby airports include Kassel-Calden Airport, which is about 45 minutes by car. Furthermore, Cologne Bonn Airport (CGN) and Düsseldorf Airport (DUS) are also viable options. Cologne Bonn Airport is approximately 280 kilometers from Göttingen and can be reached by train in about 3 hours, while Düsseldorf Airport is around 300 kilometers away, with a train journey time of approximately 3.5 hours.
